Note the 7-8, a 15-point tile is not a count tile. A dip is two marks, dive is three and plunge is four. Play usually consists of four players. If playing for marks, play continues until the bidding team has scored enough to match their bid ("made their contract"), or else is "set" by not winning enough tricks and points to match their bid. ^ "Hallettsville Chamber of Commerce". The 7-3 adds another ten count and the minimum bid is 39. If a player is denied the possibility of winning, or set, then they instead lose the amount they bid from their total. Their partner then turns their dominoes face down, and does not participate in that hand. Bid Before each hand, and based on the seven dominoes drawn by each player, the first person clockwise from the dealer will either pass or bid in order to win the right to choose the trumps and style of play for that hand. All players must agree to allow nel-o bidding before the game begins. A miscalculation here (a domino not being a certain winner) will usually result in the automatic loss of the game. The bidder must have three doubles to do this. Archived from the original on February 21, 2012. Example, if a team with a winning bid of 30 wins 31 points, they add 31 points to their total. If the bidding team does not make their contract they do not score on the hand and the setting team is awarded the bid in addition to any points they caught (if the bid is 30 and the bidding team only catches 26 points, the bidding team receives 0 points while the setting team receives 30 points for the bid and 16 for the points in the hand for a total of 46 points). If either the 3-7 or the 2-8 are led, the person who leads the tile may optionally announce that the lower number on the tile is the suit of the trick. Sometimes nel-o is only allowed by the dealer, if the first three players all passed. The highest valued domino of the leading suit wins, unless a trump is played, in which case the highest trump wins. Total of 140 points to be won in all hands: 95 count points (tiles with 5, 10 or 15 pips) + 9 tricks x 5 points per trick = 95 + 9x5 = 140. The minimum starting bid is 42. Dominoes must be played in this order by all players. Each player gets 10 dominoes, the starting bid is 40. Sevens Another less common rule is to allow a player to bid Sevens. Failing to catch all 7 tricks results in a loss of 21 points. The object of the game is to be the first team to reach seven "marks" or 250 points. Hand After each player gets one chance to bid, the highest bidder chooses the trump for that hand, which can consist of designating as the trump one of the following: a particular "suit" (blanks through sixes, i.e. all tiles containing a six on one or both sides behaves as a trump when played); doubles (any tile containing the same number of pips on each of the two halves of the marked surface of that tile will behave as the trump in that hand when played); or may play with no trump, also known as "follow me". In some cases, when playing for marks, if the player leading has no chance of losing (e.g., their hand holds the remaining most valuable tiles still in that game), that player may "lay down", meaning they show why they can't lose by exposing the remaining dominoes. The reward for attaining the bid is typically a tally mark, or in numerical scoring, the reward is the point total the player bid in a race to 250. This rule only applies to leads of the 3-7 or 2-8, only when announced by the trick leader, and only when these tiles are not members of the trump suit. The high-bidder receives the points they win if they make their bid. Doing so is worth 21 points. When scoring some Texas A&M University students make marks of "A" and "M" around a large "T" to make an A&M logo. The bids can occasionally be stated in "marks", signifying the tally mark awarded to a winning hand. Plunge Also called Crash, this variation is exactly like Splash, except four (or in some variants, three) marks are bid and the bidder must have four doubles. (It is a mathematically accurate extension of 42 from 7 to 11 tricks.) All rules in The Big Game are the same as "standard 42" except: Play is with an 8-8 set of dominoes. The exception is that if the bidder doesn't make his bid, he doesn't get any points for his tricks, and instead gets minus his bid. The maximum opening bid under standard bidding is two marks, or "84", with each successive bid being one additional mark. An opening 41 bid invites the watery responses, but a naked dip, dive or plunge is allowed. There are many variations and exceptions to standard bidding, which are covered in Special Contracts, below. So 3-7 tile can lead the trick as a 3-suit tile (the third highest tile in the 3's suit), or 2-8 tile as the second highest tile in the 2's suit. Counters are thus: 0-5, 1-4, 2-3, 4-6, 5-5, 7-3, 8-2. If the bidder's team succeeds in taking all the tricks, the team earns two marks. When playing for points, play continues until all seven tricks have been won. In this game, no domino has a special value, and all tricks remain worth one point. As in 42, bids of 1 or 2 marks can be made, if no one has bid that amount. Each player outbidding the opening maximum bid would result in a bid of 5 marks. Bidding proceeds clockwise, and players continue in the bidding process until they pass. Dominoes are classified as "sevens" (the 4-3, 5-2, and 6-1), "one away" (dominoes adding to six or eight), "two away" (adding to five or nine), etc. Score is by points (similar as in Moon). Each team keeps track of how many points they make, and gets that many points each turn. The game they developed, which was the precursor to today's 42, found acceptance since dominoes did not carry the negative stigma of card-playing. 30 The minimum bid. The nel-o bidder's team scores a mark if they catch no tricks. Doubles may be weighted either as the high of their suit, as a suit of their own, or least commonly as the low of their suit. ^ "Texas 42 - A Game of Dominoes". 140,[5] is another variant played with a double-nine set of dominoes. In some variations the dominoes are reshuffled and the hand restarts. Terminology There are a number of special terms in the game of 42: dominoes: rocks, bones shuffle: shake, wash, stir suit: number on one end of the domino 0s: blanks, nils, windows 1s: aces 2s: deuces (or "ducks") 3s: treys the one-blank: roach, the Diane the six-three: the devil the six-five: Greer County the two-one: domination domino the two-three: rabbit's foot low: nello, nil off(s): domino(es) in bidder's hand that isn't trump suit or double bad off(s): offs which if led risk the loss of "count" dominoes (e.g. the five-one) to not follow suit when appropriate: renege one who reneges: reneger play a low domino in an attempt to lose the lead: punt a bid made solely to deny an opponent the trump selection: spite bid the verb meaning to play a trump on a non-trump: trump to have three of the trump suit chosen by an opponent: have them three deep the double of any trump suit: the "bull" or "big kahuna" the trump immediately below the double: the "cow" or "moo-moo" the trump immediately below the cow: the "calf" walk: a typically low ranking domino led when all dominoes that can win it have been played a hand that cannot be beaten: a rollover hand, a lay down, or a "walker" one who pulls too many dominoes when drawing: pregnant count which adds up to 5: a nickel count which adds up to 10: a dime follow-me: a hand called to be played with no trumps shooter: bidding 42 double shooter: bidding 84 dominoes worth no points: trash dominoes worth points: count, grease, sugar, or money trumps and doubles: a situation where the person leading knows he can capture all remaining tricks because his hand consists only of doubles and a controlling set of trumps Optional Rules Nel-O Also known as nillo, nil, low, nello, or low-boy, nel-o is an optional house rule that allows players with an otherwise low-scoring hand to bid. The minimum bid is 100. The winner of the trick usually moves the played dominoes to an area near their hand, face up. Play then proceeds in a clockwise fashion with the high bidder having the first play of the first trick. The two remaining dominoes, known as "The Widow", goes to whoever gets the bid. If not, the team that sets them wins their bid plus any points they took during the hand. Third bidder must bid or the fourth bidder may either ask his partner to name trumps or play 39 for two marks. For example, the 4:3 domino is a 4 unless threes are trumps. It is played with 3 people, no teams. The game is played by removing all of the blank dominoes except for the double blank. Shoot the Moon is another variant. If the bid winner takes the tile into his hand, he discards face-down some other non-count tile to take his hand back down to 11 tiles. Retrieved 2012-10-09. This is the highest possible bid, unless another player elects to "shoot it over" (the player who is shooting the moon, this makes their own bid worth 42 points. That person then throw away two dominoes, though they are not allowed to throw away trumps or count. Points: A game is typically played to 250 points. The game is played to 21 points, and the minimum bid is 4. Each player draws 9 tiles. The highest bid wins the auction and that player has the right to name the trump suit and lead. There are 9 tricks and each trick is worth 5 points. William and Walter were able to incorporate dominoes in their game, which mimicked the mechanics of a trick-taking card game like pitch. The opponents receive the number of points they have made, in any case. In the deal, each of the four players takes 11 tiles each. A 46 bid will out bid one mark and conventions include "dip," "dive," and "plunge" bids depending on the number of doubles (3, 4 or 5) held. A player may choose to bid nel-o, instead of bidding a number or passing, if they have particularly low dominoes in a hand (the -blanks and -ones of several suits). ^ "HCR 84". If the nel-o bidder catches even one trick, the hand is immediately over, and the opposing team scores a mark. This is usually documented with tally marks. If the opponents win even one trick the plunge bid fails and the opponents get the marks. Lubbock: Texas Tech University Press. Some of the terminology also differs, such as bidding "pistol" instead of "nello". All count must be in play. This means they intend to win the hand by not catching any tricks at all. When more than one domino of the same distance from seven is played, the first domino played is considered the winner. This adds 2 more count tiles worth ten each: the 7-3 and 8-2. Other variations are scoring the dominoes to 250 or spelling XXX then a slash through it to count 7. The other team receives the bid amount plus the points won during the hand. After the hand, if the bidding team reaches their bid they are awarded the number of points taken in the hand (if a team bids 30 and reaches 35, they score 35 for the hand), and the non-bidding team is awarded any points they caught during the hand. 3-handed 42 is played by only three players. Stacking In some houses of play, no stacking of dominoes is allowed regardless of the winning bid. 72, a variant played with two sets of dominoes, blanks removed. Otherwise a two mark bid is the maximum allowed except to overbid another. All tricks must be won for a successful plunge bid. Retrieved June 19, 2011. The total of all the count pieces (35) plus the seven tricks equals 42, which is the number of points in a hand, hence the name of the game. This leaves 1 tile remaining in the boneyard (which the winning bidder can choose to exchange it with one of his tiles, if he wishes). There are five "count" pieces (those whose spots total five or ten) that are worth that number of points: the 0-5, 1-4 and 2-3 are worth five points each; the 5-5 and 6-4 are each worth ten. (An 8-8 set is created by taking a 9-9 set and removing the ten tiles with 9s on them, leaving a 45-tile 8-8 set.) The count tiles are still those with 5 or 10 pips. 42 (One Mark) The bidder's team must win all the tricks. Bidding is usually the same as in traditional 4-handed play (i.e. minimum bid of 30 and so forth). When led, each tile is considered to belong to the suit of its higher number, unless the tile is a trump. However, it is usually done as a time-saver for experienced players. Marks: A game is typically played for seven marks. Retrieved 2008-10-18. If it is count, he MUST take it into his hand. The name of the game comes from "shooting the moon." If a player states during the bidding phase that they will shoot the moon, then they must catch all tricks. ^ Playing 140 - A game for 6 players and double-nine dominoes Retrieved from " 2Trick-taking dominoes game A game of 42 42, also known as Texas 42, is a trick-taking game played with a standard set of double six dominoes. An even less common version of Sevens is looper, where the bidder takes it for less than 42 points (one mark) and can lose a trick. Geezer uses a set of double seven dominoes and each player draws nine. ^ Playing 140 - A game for 6 players and double-nine dominoes Retrieved from " Two local boys, William Thomas and Walter Earl, developed the game in response to a general disapproval of card-playing games held by many Protestants at that time. At that time, the team with the highest score and who has made their contract is awarded the correct number of marks. If any of these variants are used, a declaration is required and all players must agree to allow them before play begins. The player who wins the bid has the option of trading any one of their dominoes for the one not chosen. When a bid of "sevens" wins the contract, all players reveal their dominoes face-up and order them from sevens to maximum-away. The eccentrics who developed this game also added strange low bids for nello, in which anything can be low in its suit. (Unlike 42, players may make more than one bid, until they pass.) A Game is 400 points across hands. There is also a 51 bid, in which count is trump and 5 or 10 count dominoes must be played in response to a count lead of the bidder and the bidder must catch all except three tricks with no count on the three. If that team does not reach their bid (30 in this case), they get zero points. Texas Legislature. In others, a bid of one mark entitles the contract-winning team to stack the won tricks in two stacks of equal height, where a bid of two or more marks entitles them to stack the won tricks in a single stack. Winning 42: Strategy and Lore of the National Game of Texas. The successful bidder's partner does not play in a nello game. Designating 42 as the official State Domino Game of Texas. A player must bid at least 42 (one mark) to go in sevens, and losing even one trick will set the bidder. Dominoes are played trick atop trick to avoid revealing what has been played thus far in the hand. The hand is played as per usual. The Big Game is a variant for players who want a challenging game based on a larger set of tiles instead of special bids. Hence the game name. Instead of the highest domino winning each trick, the domino whose sum is closest to seven wins. Scoring Each trick is worth one point. The first team to reach 500 points wins. Play usually consists of six players. Looper is not widely played and is rarely allowed by legitimate 42 players. The minimum bid is 30. Play usually consists of six to eight players. The game consists of a number of hands (a maximum of 13 hands when playing for marks). The 42 points consist of one (1) point for each of the seven tricks, plus 35 points from the five "count" dominoes whose total pips are a multiple of 5 (the 6-4 and double-5 for 10 points each, as well as the 4-1, 3-2, and 5-blank for 5 points each). Jump bids are allowed for Splash and Plunge. ISBN 0-89672-443-3. Successive bids must be higher than this bid, or the player must pass (make no bid). Bids start in 100, and goes on steps of five until 140 (100, 105, 110, 115..., 140); then in multiples of 140 (or marks). Variations 84, a variant played with two sets of dominoes. Shoot 42: play 42 with other people online in a browser, includes audio/video chat, subscription required Notes ^ a b Roberson, Dennis (2000). Some players mark straight lines that spell out the capital letters ALL. Nel-o rules may also be used in the domino game "Shoot the Moon." Splash The bidder bids three marks, and their partner controls the game as if the partner won the bid, without discussion with the bidder. Special contracts 84 (Two Marks) The bidder's team must win all the tricks. If this can't be avoided, any count goes to the other team, and any trump that is thrown out must be turned face up. Each player draws 7 dominoes leaving one that is set aside. The blank-ace is removed from the set, and each player draws 9 dominoes. If all players pass the dealer must bid 30. The winner then plays first on the next hand. All players must follow the lead with the same suit if possible, known as "following suit". Other variations of nel-o treat doubles in a special way. Trick-taking dominoes game A game of 42 42, also known as Texas 42, is a trick-taking game played with a standard set of double six dominoes. The bid winner looks at the one tile left over face-down from the deal. 42 is often referred to as the "national game of Texas".[1] Tournaments are held in many towns,[1] and the State Championship tournament is held annually in Hallettsville, Texas on the first Saturday of March each year.[2] In 2011 it was designated the official State Domino Game of Texas.[3] History According to a 1985 news article written by Christopher Evans of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, the game originated in Garner, Texas. From there, the game spread throughout Texas.[4] Rules Object The game is played by four people, in teams of two each, where the partners sit across from each other. Thus if 3s are low, a 3-6 is lower than the 6-blank. If they do not have a domino matching the suit of the lead, they may play any domino. The opposing team will play their lowest dominoes, trying to force the nel-o bidder into catching a trick. 6 players play as 3 teams of 2 players per team, sitting alternatively (A-B-C-A-B-C). In any suit, the double of that suit is highest, and then the tiles are ranked by the off-suit pip. One tile is not dealt and is left face-down. If it is not count, he may choose whether to take it into his hand. There are no special contracts in this game. Typically, the bidder determines what to bid by estimating how many of the forty-two (42) total points the team will win based on those seven dominoes.
